Subject: Invitation to visit CDC-Atlanta Global Health Facilities - April 19/20, 2018

Dear Nathan,

I hope this message finds you well. I am writing to invite you to participate in an educational trip to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, Georgia. The goal of the visit is to learn about CDC's global health expertise in detecting deadly and debilitating diseases overseas to save lives, strengthen health systems, and protect Americans at home and abroad. This opportunity is sponsored by the United Nations Foundation. Trip participants will depart on Thursday, April 19 in the afternoon, and return to Washington, D.C. on the evening of Friday, April 20.

In today's interconnected world, a disease can spread from an isolated village to any major city in as little 36 hours. For the last 60 years, CDC's public health experts in Atlanta and around the world have worked around the clock to stop the spread of disease by detecting and controlling outbreaks at their source. This expertise has also helped countries strengthen their own capacity to prevent, detect, and respond to public health threats.

The trip itinerary will examine two areas of global health threats – vaccine-preventable diseases and malaria – during a day of discussions with CDC leadership, a tour of the agency's Emergency Operations Center, deep dives into the fight to eradicate polio and eliminate measles and rubella, global health security, and walk-throughs of the pioneering mosquito insectary and parasitic disease labs.

As your host, the United Nations Foundation will cover all trip expenses in accordance with the rules established by the Committee on Ethics. In order to facilitate an in-depth and intimate experience, we are limiting the number of participants. We ask that you RSVP to this invitation no later than March 14 to allow time for UNF to submit the required Ethics forms. Submission requires a completed packet of documentation including information from the UN Foundation. Please respond as soon as possible with your interest in joining this trip and we will provide you with the necessary information for submission.

I hope you will be able to join this opportunity. We are confident that learning more about CDC's leadership in strengthening global health will be particularly beneficial to your work in Congress.

Best regards,
Brian Massa
